

NORTH DAKOTA LEGISLATIVE HISTORY RESEARCH – QUICK GUIDE

Legislative history research refers to using documents and/or audio recordings produced during the bill or resolution process to attempt to determine the North Dakota State Legislature’s intent, or to clarify vague or ambiguous language.

Commonly, legislative history is bill or resolution versions, and committee hearing minutes and testimony.

Basic Steps:

1. Find the North Dakota Session Laws for the statute.

2. Use Session Laws to identify the bill(s) or resolution(s) by the year of the legislative session and the House or Senate bill number.

3. Using the year of the legislative session and the bill or resolution number, locate the legislative history, which may be available online, in print, on microfiche, or audio recordings.

FIRST, FIND THE NORTH DAKOTA SESSION LAWS FOR THE STATUTE:

The first step in legislative history research for the North Dakota Constitution and North Dakota statutes is to find the session laws and/or dates of enactment and amendment for the specific section.

The North Dakota Century Code at legis.nd.gov doesn’t include session law information. You’ll need to use an alternate source.
