She is a Senior Fellow in Law and Applied Neuroscience at the Center for Law, Brain and Behavior at Harvard Medical School and the Petrie-Flom Center for Health Law Policy at Harvard Law School. She is the director of a neurolaw library affiliated with Harvard Medical School. She is on the Ethics Committee for the American Psychological Association and president-elect of the Massachusetts Association of Family and Conciliation Courts. She presents regionally and nationally on psychology and law topics. Recent publications include the book Substance Use and Parenting: Best Practices for Family Court Practitioners, a white paper on the Science of Late Adolescence: A Guide for Judges, Attorneys, and Policy Makers, and an article on the opioid crisis and family drug courts.

Session 1: Medical Marijuana—Jason Wahl

This session will provide a broad spectrum of information about medical marijuana in North Dakota, with specific time devoted to both an explanation of a minor, how minors apply and qualify, and the role of designated caregivers of minors using medical marijuana. Attendees will also learn that there have been some instances in which medical marijuana use has been brought up by parties during divorce proceedings.

Session 2: - Ariana Meyers

Crafting effective parenting plans requires a careful balance between parental rights and the best interests of the child—especially when legal substances like medical marijuana or alcohol are involved. This presentation will provide practical strategies for drafting comprehensive parenting plans that address the use of legal substances. We will explore key legal considerations, judicial trends, and best practices to ensure that parenting agreements protect children's well-being while respecting parental autonomy. Attendees will gain insights into crafting enforceable provisions and handling disputes.

Session 3: Stephanie Tabashneck, PhD.

Dr. Tabashneck will discuss screening for substance use, how substance use and misuse impacts parenting, and how to craft science-based solutions that protect children, attachment, and children's relationships with their parents.
